Concerning Contracts.

"What shall we do about labor next year? That question is asked of us by a level balanced, level headed farmer, says the Barnwell People. The following is the People's answer:

We answer that in our opinion the less labor an employer can get along with it next year the better it will be for him and for the general improvement. For the present let there be clear understandings between employer and employee.

Senator Bates has prepared and will introduce on the first of the next session of the Legislature a bill that he thinks will meet and counter-tail all the objections raised by Judge Brawley in declaring the South Carolina labor law unconstitutional.

While we do not profess to be a law expert his proposed Bill seems to be in strict harmony with constitutional and congressional provisions and to solve the problem.
